

Op-ed Submitted to the New York Times

Bill Hibbard 22 Oct 2017

If you're curious about the real problem with artificial intelligence, here it is in a nutshell: The Twentieth Century was largely about human minds creating mathematical models of things to understand and control them. The Twenty First Century will largely be about things creating mathematical models of human minds to understand and control them.